Wrong

Where there are people, there are also viruses.

When someone is coughing or sneezing, viral particles are catapulted into the near environment. They tend to spread very quickly and so may go from one hand to the other while shaking hands. Thus not only the COVID-infection, but also colds, gastro-intestinal infections and the flu can be triggered.

Right

Others talk, we are active.

In daily life we are constantly exposed to situations where we touch things already touched before by hundreds of people. In order to cut the spreading of viruses, tippi comes into play.
